COMPILER

Ruth Stubblefield, a native of Oakland, California, is the great granddaughter of Clayton and Amanda Johnson Stubblefield. This couple were residents of Walker County, Texas, as early as 1849. Ruth came to Walker County in the summer of 1998, to research this family. She found that no survey of the Black cemeteries had been done for the county. As a labor of love and a desire to find the burial sites of her ancestors, she returned in 1999, and has catalogued all the known Black cemeteries. Ruth visited each cemetery, noting names and dates. She then typed this information in book format. This is a valuable research tool that will be helpful for years to come.

The entire Walker County Genealogical Society is appreciative to Ruth for her wonderful contribution to the preservation of Walker County history.

COVER

Huntsville artist Juanita Lynch sketched the First Baptist Church, Tenth Street, in the middle 1940's. This Gothic structure housed the church, which was organized in 1869, until it was torn down when the new church building was constructed across the street in 1952. In 1877, Clayton Stubblefield, Thomas Rolin, Mitchell Mosely, John James and Madison McKinney, trustees of the Colored Baptist Church of Huntsville, purchased a half-acre of land for additional property for the church. Clayton and Amanda Stubblefield and Jennie Branch (mother of Amanda) are listed on the roll of the church. No cemetery was ever near this church. The graves were added to the scene as a remembrance of all those ancestors who are buried in unmarked graves in Walker County.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Dorothy Mae Hightower has shared her collection of obituaries, funeral programs and newspaper clippings. Her vast collection covers over fifty years of deaths in Walker County. The additions at the end of each cemetery are from her files. Dorothy Mae also made contacts with property owners and obtained entry to many locked cemeteries.

Stanford Douglas spent time riding and showing where cemeteries were located. Many of these cemeteries are in very obscure locations.

BOOK DESIGN LAYOUT AND INDEX

This book was designed and indexed by J. D. and Johnnie Jo Dickenson of Dickenson Research, Professional Genealogists, Huntsville, Texas.

TERMS USED IN THIS BOOK

Stone - a manufactured grave marker with no readable engraving

No Stone/Marker - a temporary marker placed by a funeral home, but is unreadable

Rock - a field stone that has been placed to designate a grave

Slab - a concrete cover, usually the full grave size

Illegible - unable to read

Cross - a concrete cross with no engraving

Stone (fallen) - a marker that has fallen forward, and can not be read

Additions - names collected by Dorothy Mae Hightower in her obituary file. These persons are buried in the cemetery, but the exact location is unknown.

Appendix - known burials after the book deadline

?? - letters or numbers missing or unreadable

Names were spelled exactly as they appeared on the stone.

A WORD ABOUT BLACK CEMETERIES

Many cemeteries are in the middle of pastures. Some are overgrown with brush and brambles. Several cemeteries were brought to our attention that have no marked graves. One we would like to mention is the Cunningham Slave Cemetery, located between Vick Spring Road and Texas Highway 75 South. At one time, wooden crosses marked the graves. With the passing of time and the elements, all graves in this cemetery are now unmarked. This has happened to many other cemeteries. Another cemetery, Harper Cemetery in Kittrell, is under water due to back up of Lake Livingston. Ruth could not gain access to Perkins and Jenkins Cemeteries.

Researchers may want to consult "Records of Huntsville Funeral Home, Inc. – Volume 1 – 1938-1949", compiled by Johnnie Jo Dickenson, 1992. This compilation includes many black burials of that time frame. Some of these burials may or may not be included in this cemetery book.

PLEASE NOTE: This book contains only the names of persons whose graves are marked with identifiable markers.
